3. Research information and activities

3.1. Fields of research; past and current research collaborations and joint initiatives

Ideophones in English, Finnish and Swedish. Relation between form and meaning; multicategoriality of ideophones and their overlap with other “ragbag” categories of grammar (esp. adverbs and interjections); translation of ideophones across languages; multimodal nature of ideophones (esp. their uses in comics).

The work is done in collaboration with FD Maria Wiktorsson from Malmö University. Some aspects have involved Eleni Seitanidi, a doctoral student at Lund University, and various BA students at Lund University who have written their BA theses on topics within this field.

Theoretical linguistics, with particular reference to Finnish and other Finnic languages; and English. Past and current topics include adverbials; prepositional and postpositional phrases; relative clauses; and argument structure and realization (esp. various passive and impersonal constructions).

For a long time this was my main research field. Large parts of the work are done by myself, but this field also involves collaboration with FD Fredrik Heinat and FD Eva Klingvall (esp. between 2008 and 2012).

Other collaborations have involved Dr. Diane Nelson (University of Leeds), Katrin Hiitam (University of Manchester) and Elsi Kaiser (University of Pennsylvania).

Scholarship of teaching and learning, in particular academic writing in English in second-language learner contexts; the use of MOOCs in teaching and learning; and the value of teaching study planning to undergraduate students. Most recent initiatives focus on the value of essay assessment in the age of (generative) AI, and on pedagogical mentoring of doctoral candidates as an aim to help them meet the needs of current academic job market.
